CHALONER

Introducing the Chaloner collection.

Explore our new curated range of fabrics, combining hand block prints, embroideries, multicoloured checks and textured jute stripes. Each design has been carefully considered to produce a range of quietly confident and enduringly beautiful fabrics suitable for curtains, upholstery, lampshades and cushions.

The name Chaloner draws on a historic textile tradition, chalon, a simple woven bed covering, and chaloner, a maker or seller of these cloths, emphasising our commitment to craftsmanship. Inspired by the Vyne House near our studio in Newbury, visited by Henry VIII, Jane Austen, and later home to Chaloner Chute. Its layered history and rich interiors have inspired a collection that reflects a legacy of resilience and evolving taste.

As with all our fabrics, Chaloner's rich yet subtle and harmonious palette combining small and large scale designs, makes for effortless coordination both within the collection and our full range.

Alderose

Alderose is an elaborate tile design printed onto natural linen in a structured straight repeat. The motif draws inspiration from a Tudor rose motif found in the wood-panelled gallery at The Vyne, interpreted through a modern lens.

Each element of the design is carefully carved into wooden blocks, with a separate block used for every colour. Printed by hand onto the fabric by our skilled craftsmen, this traditional process ensures every piece carries its own unique character.

Available in five soft, mid-tone colourways, Alderose offers a charming balance of heritage and artisanal craftsmanship.
